White-Collar Criminal Defense

For decades, DOAR has partnered with leading criminal defense lawyers on some of the most closely watched and consequential white-collar matters ever filed. We bring deep experience to high-stakes trials, with a unique understanding of the challenges in defending these types of cases, which are often highly complex and emotional. Through rigorous jury research, we help defense teams sharpen and prioritize themes that are most likely to resonate with jurors, while empirically guided jury selection, compelling graphics, and clear presentation of evidence strengthen the defense's arguments and narratives.

JURY CONSULTING

For most jurors, there is a critical distinction between acceptable business conduct and illegal activity. Through focus groups and mock trials, we identify where different jurors draw that line—and the factors that influence how they evaluate the conduct at issue. Our witness testing helps teams assess whether defendants should testify and develop strategies to maximize the effectiveness of other key witnesses. In addition, our large sample online surveys identify jurors most—and least—inclined to afford white-collar defendants a fair trial.

TRIAL CONSULTING

Keeping jurors engaged in trials often filled with voluminous and complicated financial details is the first step to persuading them. We help trial teams distill complex information into clear, compelling narratives that keep jurors focused on what matters most. Through thoughtfully structured case materials and dynamic, animated exhibits, we make key evidence more accessible, memorable, and impactful. As a trusted extension of the trial team, we ensure critical arguments are delivered with clarity, precision, and persuasive force.
